Tempo

Tempo ... the beat ... the quality which gives music direction and excitement ... the cadence to which every man marches ... the pace which will determine where he goes and what he will accomplish.

To every organization or place there is a rhythm which is uniquely its own. It is a blending of those qualities which each person brings from his own environment — a blending of the old and the new, generating the excitement of a new generation.

It is, therefore, to the benefit of Brownsburg High School that students arrive from all walks of life. Some have studied locally at the junior high or St. Malachy's. Others have moved to the community bringing with them new ideas and interests learned in other areas of the country. Still others have come as exchange students from a variety of foreign countries. The blending of all these elements has produced a tempo which is uniquely known as "Bulldog Country."

Taking Time

Finding time to complete the tasks of life is difficult enough, but taking time to share with others is a trait found only in a few.

BHS was fortunate to have such a person on staff — James Acton. His contributions to student life were innumerable: assisting in discipline, organizing Student Council, planning for Open House and Homecoming, counting and distributing textbooks, arranging bus transportation for field trips. But regardless of the task, he was always there with his encouraging smile. English teacher Mrs. Marcy Bloomer echoed the sentiments of many. "In my five years at BHS, there has always been one constant to count on — Jim Acton. He has always been available for everything, from being a source of information to being a sympathetic listener."

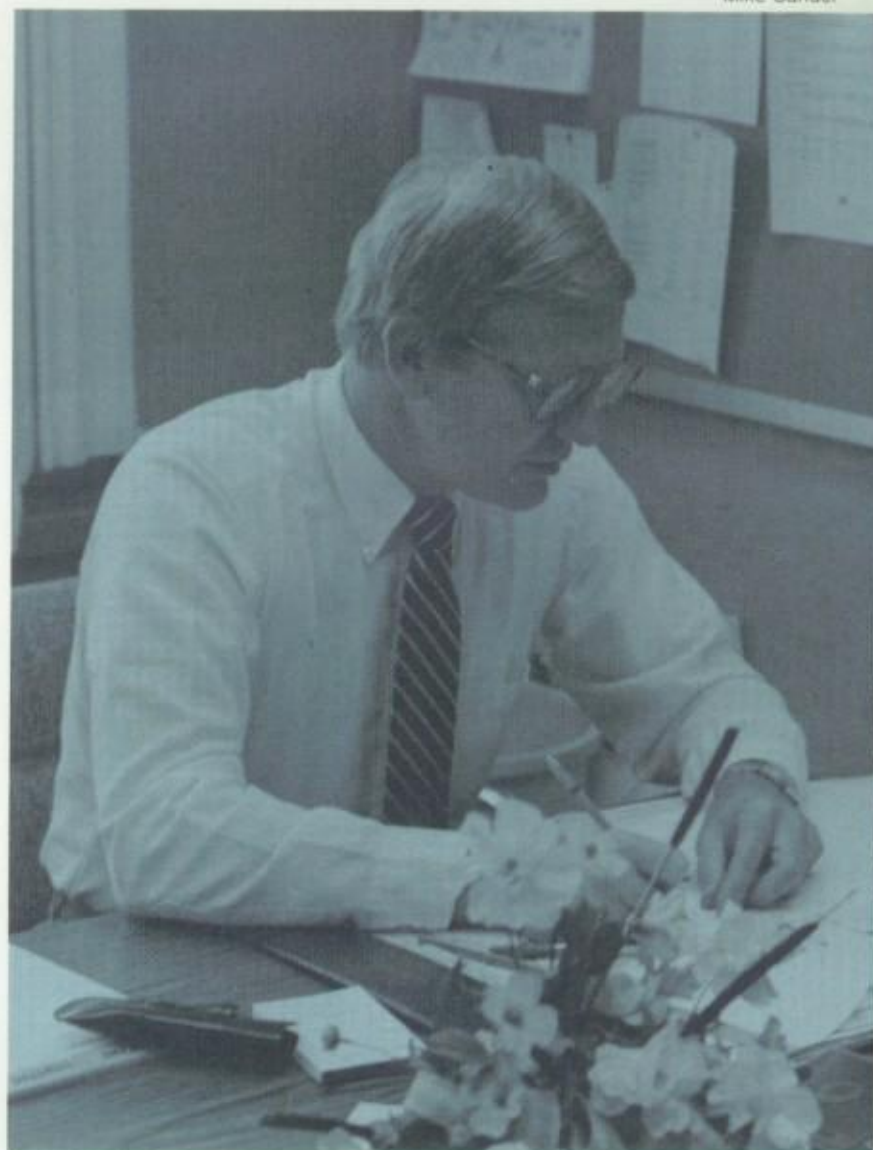

Mr. Acton came to Brownsburg first as a junior high teacher and coach after graduating from Avon H.S. and Indiana Central University. Since 1964 he has held a variety of positions: teacher, coach, athletic director, and assistant principal. In addition to school activities, he also found time to participate in Lion's Club, Kiwanis Club, and Indian Guides. His wife, Judy, and his sons, Jon and Jason, shared his interest in Brownsburg. In spite of his busy schedule with family, school, and civic affairs, Mr. Acton always found time to become involved in the lives of those about him.

What's going on? Student council senior Jeff Chlystun discusses last minute plans with Mr. Acton concerning the fall Open House.

Neatness? Nah. Jim Acton works hard to complete the many piles of necessary paper work that have accumulated on his desk in one day's time.

Well, I think . . . Mr. Acton gives Junior Bobby Brown his own opinion of the outcome of the upcoming football game.

Faster Pace

Jim Tolley

There are always those students who are driven by a faster beat to excel in several areas of school life: academics, athletics, leadership, and service. These students handle the pressures of juggling heavy demands on their time and talents.

The Top Ten Seniors were nominated by their fellow classmates and then selected by a vote of the faculty. Not all of these were high in class rank or outstanding in athletics. Yet all of them made contributions to the school in a variety of ways. Each one held an office in a club, for a class, or on a team. Seven of the ten attained very high academic rankings. Half of them lettered in a varsity sport, and four were active in the performing arts.

Long hours and hard work paid off for these outstanding individuals. They set goals for themselves and were not afraid to pursue them. When asked the secret of his success, Jim Tolley responded, "Pride in oneself and a willingness to succeed." This attitude on the part of all ten students was in evidence throughout their four years at BHS.

changing Tempos

Variety is the spice of life!

A cliché? Yes. Truth? Double yes. The change of pace in everyday life, the change of tempo in music, the change of one generation to the next — these are the elements which cause excitement and push us to higher plateaus.

The changes which have come to BHS have brought new challenges in every area of school life. New administrators Mr. Ellsberry and Mr. Heck brought a less formal atmosphere. According to junior Donna Miley, "I think they have relaxed the school. The students feel more like they belong." The gradual transition to a new athletic conference, C-SAC, with the element of the unknown caused mixed feelings of frustration and excitement. New faculty members from a variety of backgrounds added new dimensions to teaching methods. In every direction changes were very apparent: new paint, new courses, new equipment, new athletic trainer, new band uniforms. The total of these gave a uniqueness to remember.

Getting organized Mr. Heck, the new vice-principal for the '85-'86 school year, starts his career by getting organized.

Dynamic duo BHS added two new classes to its curriculum for the 1985-86 year: etymology, a vocabulary building course; and music appreciation, a course designed to expand one's musical knowledge.

unleashed energy

Paul Wycoff

Paul Wycoff

Where do you go on a windy day? This sailboat catches the wind on a gusty day at Eagle Creek Reservoir to give its sailors an exciting, speed-filled ride.

Need a ride? Bicycle riding takes on a new edge at the Major Taylor Velodrome.

The rushing of water. The hum of a perfectly tuned racing engine. The pounding of feet. All of these things bring to mind one thing — speed. Dictionaries define it as the act of moving quickly, while chemistry books define speed as the rate multiplied by the time. Speed brings diverse groups of people together and separates the outstanding from the mediocre.

The effort of BHS students was evident not only at school, but it also branched out into the surrounding communities. This hidden energy was unleashed in a variety of ways and in various locations. The field of activities ranged from the waves in a swimming pool to the all-familiar jogging path. Junior Jennifer Wycoff gave her view on outside activities: "I enjoy synchronized swimming at the Natatorium because it gives me goals to strive for and lets me meet a lot of new people." The constant quest for self-improvement controlled the speed of each individual's life.

Blended rhythms

Each culture has a rhythm which is distinctly its own reflecting the values and beliefs of its people. When these people move from one place to another, they take this rhythm with them adding color and diversity to their new environments.

BHS was fortunate to have four foreign exchange students visit for the year. Living with local families, they came not only to learn firsthand how Americans lived but also to share their customs. New Zealander Wanda Davis, who called herself a Kiwi, shared her goal for the year: "I want to learn the everyday life of Americans and see another side of life." From England, West Germany, Mexico, and New Zealand, these students added a whole new dimension to the lives of Brownsburg students.

the victory beat

Pride was ablaze through the halls of Brownsburg High School during Homecoming week. Many long hours were put into the building of the class floats, practicing for Powder Puff football, and planning for the Homecoming dance held the night afterwards. To many, Homecoming was just another football game, but to others it was a time to get enthusiastic about school and really show off their school pride. Junior Tim Haus was amazed by the amount of school pride this year, "Everybody was more enthusiastic. I could hardly wait for Friday to come. Everybody thought that our team was the greatest." The continuous build up of excitement was finally at its peak at seven-thirty, Friday the twenty-seventh of September. At halftime the crowd was patiently awaiting the announcement of the Homecoming Queen. Before that announcement, the order of placement of the floats were given. In fourth place were the sophomores, second the freshmen, and first the seniors. Then finally, the four Homecoming Queen candidates Missy Albrecht, Tabby Compton, Kim Gilbert, and Jodi Wilson were escorted onto the field; and then the queen was announced. With arms in the air and tears in her eyes, Tabby Compton was crowned Homecoming Queen. The 1984 Class AAA State Champion Bulldogs furthered their winning streak to 5-0 by tromping their Homecoming foes, the Frankfort Hotdogs, 39-0.

synchronized time

Holding a job and also finding time for schoolwork could present a problem. Yet many BHS students have solved this dilemma successfully. When asked for her solution, junior Lisa Steuerwald, who works at Magic Arabians, a private stable, remarked: "I have an understanding boss, which helps. I go right from school to work and I get home around five unless there is a special occasion. If I don't get my homework done, I finish in the morning before school." Holding jobs required students to allocate their time better.

Report to the office immediately! With the wide variety of offices available to students, this message might cause confusion. Different types of passes have helped to solve this dilemma. While a summons to the office terrified or angered a few, most students found the visits to the front hall very helpful.

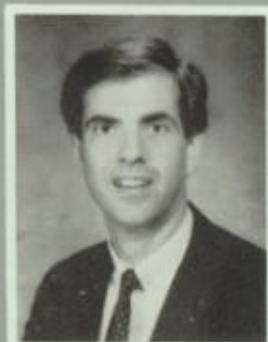

One of the newest additions to the administrative staff was the new principal Mr. James Ellsberry. He came to BHS with a varied background of experience. Raised in Terre Haute, he went on to study at ISU, Purdue, and Michigan State for undergraduate and graduate work. He has held teaching or administrative positions at Fayette Township, Brazil, Edinburgh, Ball State, and, most recently, with eighteen years of service at North Central H.S. As a father of four, he still has found time to enjoy his favorite activities — fishing and sports. When asked about his expectations for BHS, he commented, "I would like for the student body to maintain its positive attitude so that school can remain a place where we work hard, play hard, and can enjoy each other's company."

The arrival of Mr. Ellsberry has brought a change of atmosphere to the school. Senior Tabby Compton summed it up this way: "He's just a nice guy. He cares more for the students and shows a lot of interest in both athletics and academics."

Official Welcome Mr. Heck enjoys a faculty reception along with his wife and sons.

Through a variety of courses, the Business Department prepared students for future careers. Courses only in typing and shorthand no longer met the needs of today's business world. Students were also able to learn skills necessary for working with high tech business machines.

A complete revamping of the DECA program led to a new course in marketing called Marketing Education. A club related to this class facilitated what was done in the classroom. The main goal of the class was to prepare students for careers in marketing. As Mr. Bennett put it, "I would hope that they would get a better understanding of marketing and be able to apply that to a career."

With the changes made in the Business Education Department, students were better able to compete in the job market of today.

Leadin' the class to success

The Junior Class Officers and Class Council have shown much dedication to the school and their class. Junior Class President Brett Patterson was involved in many different activities in the high school. This was the first year for him to be a class president, but he was Vice President during his freshman year. Jeff Ganote, Vice President, has been involved in class council since his freshman year, but this was his first term as an officer. Class Treasurer Chris Graves held the office of class president during his freshman year. Lan Tran was Class Secretary. This was a totally different group of leaders then the previous year. The Junior Class Council consisted of:

Front Row Leslie Benge, Julie McDowell, Bill Wacker; Second Row Michelle Bayless, Claudia Gilmore, Paula Morgan, Jennifer Hughes, Dana Middleton; Back Row Kristi Throneburg, Gaye Unruh, Diendra Norman, Becca McCullough, Joni Garrison, Amy Walters, Elisa Snapp, Angela Snapp, Tina Fay, and Betsy Eller. This class, under the supervision of Mr. Shiffer, has proven that it has the capability to succeed.

Piggin' out 'Dog Style

Forget the Alpo, forget the Gravy Train — the Brownsburg Dogs liked pizza! Pizza was by far the most liked food of the students at BHS. One could see this on a Friday night when Noble Romans was packed. According to junior Betsy Eller, "I like Noble Romans because of the style of the pizza. I also like their bread sticks and the Son of Monster." The runner up was steak. Some people liked the nice juicy pink ones that melted in the mouth. Others preferred the well-done charbroiled tasting ones. Junior Heather Lukenbill stated that she liked "ribeye steaks done with A-1 sauce." Mexican food was next because it was spicy. Students liked Casa Gallardo's as well as Chi Chi's and Pancho Pepper's.

Other favorites mentioned were spaghetti, lasagna, french fries, and chicken. As anyone could see, BHS students liked all kinds of food; but these Bulldogs would take pizza any time that they were given it.

The Porsche was voted the most popular car by the students surveyed. In reflecting upon his favorite sports car, senior Andy Broyles said, "The simple curves of a Porsche give it the look of elegance. But underneath that beautiful body lurks one of the most powerful engines ever developed. The combination of the beauty and the beast makes the Porsche my favorite car." Also, speaking about the Porsche, senior Karen Moore said, "It is sleek, fast, and it has social status." The Corvette, Mustang, and Lamborghini were the next most popular cars. Senior Lynn Paton's view on the Corvette was, "They look classy." The most popular cars with the students were all sports cars.

Wearin' the styles

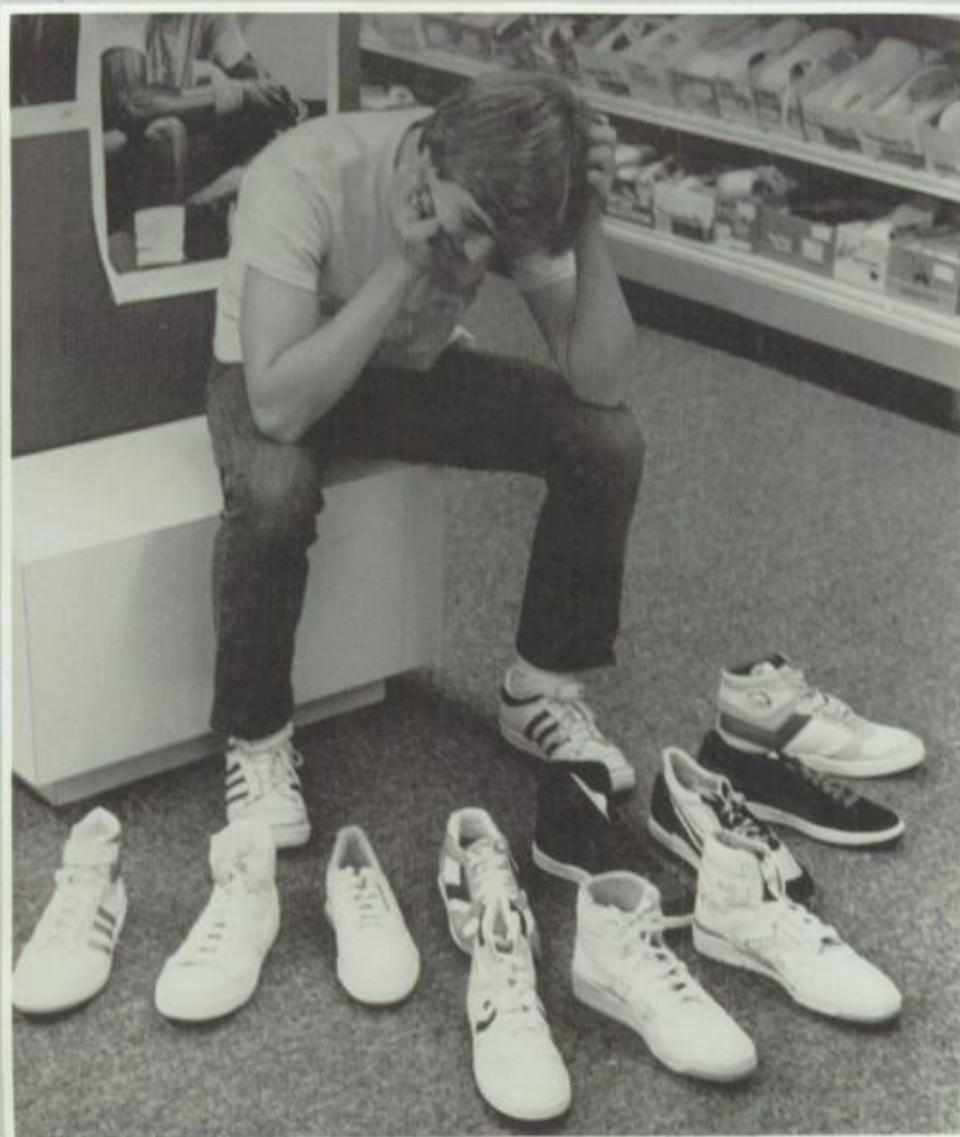

Jeans topped the list as the most popular attire for high school students. Especially popular in survey, Levi was voted the favorite jeans of the students. These jeans sold well and had a reasonable price. Levi's were popular with students and young adults for many years because they have a classic style; Levi jeans coordinate no matter what they are put with. Lee jeans were also well liked by students but were a more recently popular jean. They were slightly lower in price than other jeans. Lee jeans also had a classic style. Jordache jeans had a more trendy style, yet they have been popular for a few years. They had more of a fashion or designer look and were higher priced. But the name was not everything. According to senior Kim Jackson, "They have to look good when I put them on. They also have to fade when you wash them — like Levi's."

Walkin' on the wild side

Walking on the wild side at BHS was usually done in athletic shoes. Names such as Nikes, Converse, Adidas, Asics Tigers, Jaclar, Puma, and Reebok graced the tongues of most students' shoes. At BHS Nikes, Adidas, Converse, Asics Tigers, and Pumas topped the list as the most favorable. From sales figures, the most popular shoes in the Indianapolis area were the Converse Star-Techs, a high top basketball shoe; Reebok Freestyles, an aerobic dance shoe; Spot-bilt Monsters a turf shoe; Asics Tigers, another high top basketball shoe; and finally, Adidas Bostons, a long distance running shoe. Students wore athletic shoes for a variety of reasons; foremost was that they were comfortable. But some students wore the same shoes to school that they used to participate in sports. Perhaps the only drawback to sports shoes was their price. Unless on sale, the top name brands sold for thirty dollars on upwards to one hundred dollars for Nike Air Jordans, with the average price of fifty dollars. But this didn't seem to matter to junior Adrian Payne: "I look at the neatest thing; and if it's comfortable, I don't worry about the price." No matter what the price, BHS students always put on the lightweight comfortable shoes that were used in many sports.

Which one, Which one? Sophomore Keith Foor is having a tough time deciding which sport shoes are right for his feet.

The combination of reducing early release time and encouraging students to take more classes caused a higher enrollment in creative arts classes. Although, the increase was welcome, it was not without its problems. Auto Shop teacher Mr. Jackson especially experienced this growth. "Classes are so overcrowded that we have to work outside in the driveway." The art department found it necessary to add another teacher, Mrs. Dearing, second semester. Once again the Home Ec department was able to offer a wide variety of courses. The added courses and instructors gave students more opportunities to develop practical skills.

In an effort to stay up with the latest trends in math and science several new courses appeared in the curriculum. Basic class as well as enriched classes were added to give a broad range of class options for students. For example, students no longer had to choose between General Math and Algebra 1; the added Intro. to Algebra course provided another option for students. In the science department also,

Basic Biology and Physical Science were added to give a wider variety of courses in keeping with the new state graduation requirements. With these changes the academic program was better able to meet the needs of more students. PE. and resource courses played an important part in the students' academic studies at BHS. The focus of the P.E. program was to teach students skills that they could use in the future. In response to a question concerning P.E. being a required class, Mr. Godan, a guidance counselor, replied: "The development of an individual's body is an important aspect of the development of the total person." This program coupled with a resource program for students with particular learning difficulties added classes to meet both the physical and academic needs of the students.

Pointin' the way

Although the Sophomore class council was small, the members had goals and ideas for the future. Sophomore class president, Bobby Archer, said that his goal for the class was "to earn money for the prom next year." Bobby was active in almost every part of the student life. Even with his college preparatory schedule he played on the school's basketball and tennis teams and was active in the Latin club. Outside of school Bobby enjoyed swimming and watching movies. Some of Bobby's personal goals for the future were to attend college and to play basketball. Vice president Holly Hassfurder had several important goals for the class. One of her goals was to have a more united class with more school spirit. Another goal was to have a class that really did something for BHS. Holly was the treasurer of the Junior Classical League and had the lead in the school play You Can't Take It With You. Outside of school she was active in church and youth group, played the piano and read. Holly's plans for the future included attending Indiana University and becoming a heart surgeon. Class secretary Dawn Watkins was active on the basketball and track teams. Dawn enjoyed playing the guitar, singing and being with her animals. Her plans for the future were to attend Purdue and to become an elementary teacher. Class treasurer Susie Fierek enjoyed attending football games and concerts. Susie planned to go to college and become an accountant or lawyer. Class sponsor Mrs. Phillips was the personal secretary to Mr. Bauchert. Prior to graduation from BHS she was a majorette and was named "Miss Brownsburg."

Viewin' the silver screen

Trend setting movies had long been the source of entertainment for many spirited students. The students flocked to Loew's or General Cinema for a variety of reasons. Whether the reasons originated from fellow students recommending a particular motion picture or just a whim to get out of the house, they brought their share of students to the movie houses. According to Senior Lisa Burcham, going to the movies gave her "something to do other than staying at home or watching T.V." Movies provided an environment which promoted new fads, new fashions, and a whole new branch of music. A survey revealed the movies that captured the attention of BHS students. Leading the way as the most popular was Back to the Future, followed by a couple of sleepers Weird Science and Real Genius. Whatever the taste of the movie goer, he was certain to run into a fellow Bulldog at the theater.

Enjoyin' the classes

Whatever happened to the easy snap courses of the past? Although there were a few chow hounds who favored lunch, most students preferred math to any other subject, with English the second most preferred. The English department was the largest department in the school with math the second largest. The minimum English and math requirements were in the process of being increased. A few reasons for this were that universities, employers, and new state graduation guide lines required more academic classes to be taken. Many English teachers taught both English and a foreign language while many math teachers also taught computers or science. Senior David Smalley's reasons for liking English were "'Cause I enjoy reading and it comes easy to me." A more unusual favorite was senior Brent Creed's. He said that he liked graphic arts the best because "we were able to learn some of the skills that are used in the printing industry." Another unusual favorite was senior Ed Schaekel's. He said that choir was his favorite school subject because "it is entertaining, fun, and something I enjoy to do." It was evident from the survey that the curriculum at BHS offered courses to meet every interest.

Powder Puffin' It

The male 'Dogs were not the only ones who enjoyed football. Powder puff gave the girls a chance to show their skills in football and they seemed to enjoy it. Sophomore Toni Gibbs explained why she played, "The main reason I played powder puff was because I love to play football. It was exciting the way all of us were screaming our class yells! There was so much class spirit that you felt good." Although the seniors and juniors tied, the combined senior-freshmen team lost. The final score was 14 to 7. Powder puff also gave the guys a chance to joke around as girls. Tim Pacey, Dan Bettner, Tim Hibbard, and Brian Hogan cheered on the senior girls. Cheering on the junior girls were Kurt Honey, Jeff Starkey, Tim Dremonas, Bobby Vasel, and Chris Graves. Rooting for the sophomores were Scott Davis, Mike Schroff, and Steve Herbst.

Tunin' in to the Hits

To some of the students the radio was as much a part of the school day as textbooks. The radio station Q95 captured the most listeners from the results of our survey, followed by the radio stations WNAP, WZPL, WXIR, and WFMS. Whether the style of music was rock or country, it attracted the student listening audience. Some stations provided other features that caught attention. WZPL claimed it was the "year of the apple" and gave money away to listeners that had the number to match the one played on the air. Of course, one can not forget the publicly controversial Bob and Tom in the morning on Q95. These two men provided an extra chuckle that helped students get started in the morning. No matter what drew the student body to listen to a particular radio station, radio provided a mutual ground that all students could come and add to the TEMPO of BHS.

Because a person's grammar and writing ability were so important when interviewing for a job and because there were more and more opportunities for persons with a background in foreign languages, the roles of the English and Foreign Language departments were increasingly important. One of the goals of the Foreign Language department was to encourage more students to go on and take a second, third, and fourth year of a language to become fluent in that particular one. By offering new courses and bringing back some old courses the English and Foreign language departments experienced an increase in students. One of the new courses offered was Etymology, which was a study of words and their origins. As Mrs. Roll said, "I believe studying word origins is the fastest and most effective way to increase a student's reading, writing, and speaking vocabulary. This class can be beneficial to students in many aspects of their lives." There is no question that the study of English and Foreign languages was very important; and with the added classes at B.H.S., students had better opportunities than ever.

History — a combination of the past and the present to create the future. By using this formula, the Social Studies department along with the library provided opportunities for students to research each of these time periods. In addition to their textbooks, students had access to a wide variety of books, magazines, files, and video presentations. Librarian Mrs. Garner said "I would like to think that the library could provide something for every student and every department in the school." The mixture of the library's availability and the teachers' help gave students a good opportunity to identify their roles in today's society.

Leadin' the Pups

Without experience. Not knowing what to do. That was how the freshman class arrived at the high school. They were expected to have fund raisers and construct a float for Homecoming. They were able to complete these tasks successfully due to the good leadership and the help of parents, especially Mrs. Ganote. The mother of three, she devoted much time to the freshman class council. Although she was not a faculty member, she volunteered untold hours and enthusiasm to the class. Reflecting on the advantages and disadvantages of not being a faculty member, Mrs. Ganote remarked: "The biggest disadvantage of helping as freshman class sponsor while not being a faculty member is not being as available to the students as a sponsor should be. However, I have enjoyed helping the freshman class and I think they are a terrific group of young people." Each class officer had his own ideas and goals for the class. President Joe Johnson hoped to earn $300 in fund raisers while Brian Feldman, vice-president, wished to make his class the best in the school.

Brushin' in the wave

Some people believed that a person's hair color was directly related to his personality, and maybe it was. Every hair color seemed to be a little different, and everyone's personality also seemed to be. But was every redhead hot tempered and was every blonde female dizzy? Doubtful. A person's hair style said something about the person, and each era had its own styles. The fads of the year were preppie styles, punk styles, hard rock styles, perms, and hair colorings. Most of the students who colored their hair made it lighter rather than darker. Senior Suzette Burton said that she lightened her hair during the summer "because I like blonde hair." On the other hand, senior Karla Shircliff commented, "I would not color my hair because I like dark hair on me." Students aimed to have a style, color, and length that suited their personality and life style.

Rightin' and leftin' it

Left handedness — Was it caused by genetics, brainstructure or social environment?? It was believed, but not fully proven, that left-handedness was inherited but was fully influenced by the environment. Most gadgets such as pencil sharpeners, scissors, cameras, and golf clubs were made for right-handed people. Parents used to believe that they could encourage or force their children to use their right hands so that it would be easier for them in the right-handed world. There was no evidence in history that showed whether man was dominantly right or left-handed. It was believed, though, that the Stone Age man was ambidextrous.

Ambidextrous people were equally coordinated with both hands. Senior Joanne Bishop said: "I can do about anything with both hands; I can't write with my right hand, but I can do almost everything else." Although right or left-handedness presented a problem sometimes, there could be much humor in it.

Hey! Quit hitting my elbow Sophomores Dan Wolf and Angie Kercher laugh at one of the problems connected with having left-handed friends.

Passin' the time

You name it, it was there! The wide range of hobbies was in direct proportion to the wide variety of personality types. Hobbies offered a release of extra energy or frustration, a time to relax or to express creativity, a chance to get into shape. Hobbies provided opportunities to learn or improve a skill while having fun. Some students preferred hobbies that involved spending time with friends, while others enjoyed ones that involved being alone. Some of these spare time activities included mechanics, team sports, photography, collecting, shopping, talking on the phone, watching movies, sewing, and water sports. Junior Danny Keers enjoyed snowmobiling "because it's fun and exciting. The high speed is a thrill." Such a wide span of interests reflected the uniqueness of the individual student.

Eyein' the world

Some students allowed their eyes to talk for them. Eyes said a lot about a person. People could say even more with their eyes than with words because their eyes could express their emotions. The eyes said it all, even more than words. They conveyed the feelings of excitement and joy, of fear and sadness. The shape of the eyes and their color gave individuality to the person. From wide eyes to narrow slits to oval or almond shapes, the eyes expressed personality and emotion. The color was just as varied. Some eyes were one color in the middle rimmed with another color, while others were a mixture of colors. Some students, tired of their old eye color, tried a new look or enhanced the old with colored contacts. Junior Jeff Ganote said, "I like the variety. They are easier to find if you lose them." Whatever eyes were used for, they captured the most attention.

Soakin' up the sun

Each year thousands of people flocked to the southern states almost like the birds which flew south for the winter. Christmas and spring break were two of the busiest tourist seasons in Florida. People enjoyed the surf and sand after a cold, long winter. Florida offered romantic evenings on the beach, wild parties and an opportunity to spend time with family and friends. Many of the Florida goers tried to get the deepest, darkest tan that they could to show off to their friends back home. Florida offered enjoyment for both the young and old. But not everyone preferred Florida; other vacationers enjoyed the snow covered mountains of Colorado or the wonderful sights and fantastic food of European countries. Reflecting on her favorite vacation spot, senior Kristen Moutaw said: "Mackinac Island is unusual and fun. You can go there with a family or a boyfriend and enjoy it." Wherever Bulldogs roamed, they found the fun and excitement that they wanted.

No school could operate without the aid of support personnel. Continually having to clean heel marks off the floors and having to pick up trash before sweeping could be done, the custodians commented: "We feel by teachers exercising more discipline in the classroom our jobs could be made easier." In addition to the daily routes bus drivers made, some drivers chose to provide transportation for a variety of field trips and sporting events to earn extra money.

Also, with the addition of the bus barn, maintenance and the problem of bus storage was made easier. The cafeteria workers provided a wide variety of food for students with the lunch tray, snack bar, and the salad bar. They also continued to provide breakfast for students who did not have a chance to eat before school and for those athletes with early morning practice. With this combination of support personnel, BHS had what was needed to make the school complete.

Parent Volunteers

Providing extra time for teachers

Sharon Gibson

It took a special kind of person to be a parent — loving, tolerant, and, above all, always available. Some parents, however, went beyond to give also to their community. These were the parents who volunteered at BHS, a breed apart from just plain parents. They gave up their time to do odd jobs for the school and teachers. Whether it was tape recording a history lesson, typing a paper, or decorating a display case, each parent donated not only his time but also a part of himself. Says mother Judy Salmon about her reasons for volunteering, "What I can do will give more free time to the teacher or more teaching time. I like the parent volunteer idea because it's such a variety of work." When help was needed, these were the parents who could be counted on for assistance.

Hours of practice, singing one phrase over and over again, doing things that most students would refuse to do — just to perfect one song! The choirs worked hard this year, but the real work started last year in recruiting members for the choir program. There was always a shortage of male voices, but this year male participation was strong. Each choir participated in the fall, Christmas, and spring concets. In addition, everyone was involved in the Madrigal Dinner, either working or performing, in the organizational contest, and in the solo and ensemble contest. The show choir again presented its Spring Spec toward the end of the school year. For a change of pace, the Madrigal singers spent a week end in Bermuda competing in an international contest. Hard work paid off not only in the personal satisfaction of the members but also in the enjoyment experienced by the audience.

Marching in parades. Competing in contests. Performing at games. Giving concerts. These were only the final results of hours and hours of work spent by band and guard members during the summer, during class, and in the evenings. The hard work paid off in first division ratings at ISSMA district and regional competitions. However, it was a great disappointment to miss qualifying for state by a tiny margin. But playing music was not the only activity of the band members. Due to a much increased band enrollment, there was a shortage of band uniforms; and it was necessary to purchase new ones. Members and parents spent endless hours raising funds to purchase these. In the end, it was worth the effort as the new uniforms added color and flare to the band's performances.

REVEILLE

Spreading News Around BHS

New seemed to be the word that best described this year's REVEILLE staff. Of the twelve student staff, only one had been on the staff last year. The paper was also sporting a new look. The new staff brought such changes as new names for exciting columns and new looks for the page designs. In the area of firsts, this was a banner year. The staff put out an issue at the beginning of school for the first time in BHS history. Also, more issues were published than in any other year. There was also a first on the REVEILLE staff. Scott Dueker was the first junior to be chosen as Editor-In-Chief. Although the Journalism class had its own class period, they contributed stories to the paper as well as helped to put the paper together after school. With teamwork and a little help from advisor Mrs. Jill Levin, the REVEILLE kept BHS students aware of the happenings around them.

TEMPO

Making The Year Unforgettable

Meeting short deadlines. Hours of extra work. Drawing and re-drawing layouts. All of these tasks were quite familiar to this year's Tempo staff. From alphabetizing names to designing pages, no job was too difficult to be completed. The small staff met each challenge head on and successfully completed each.

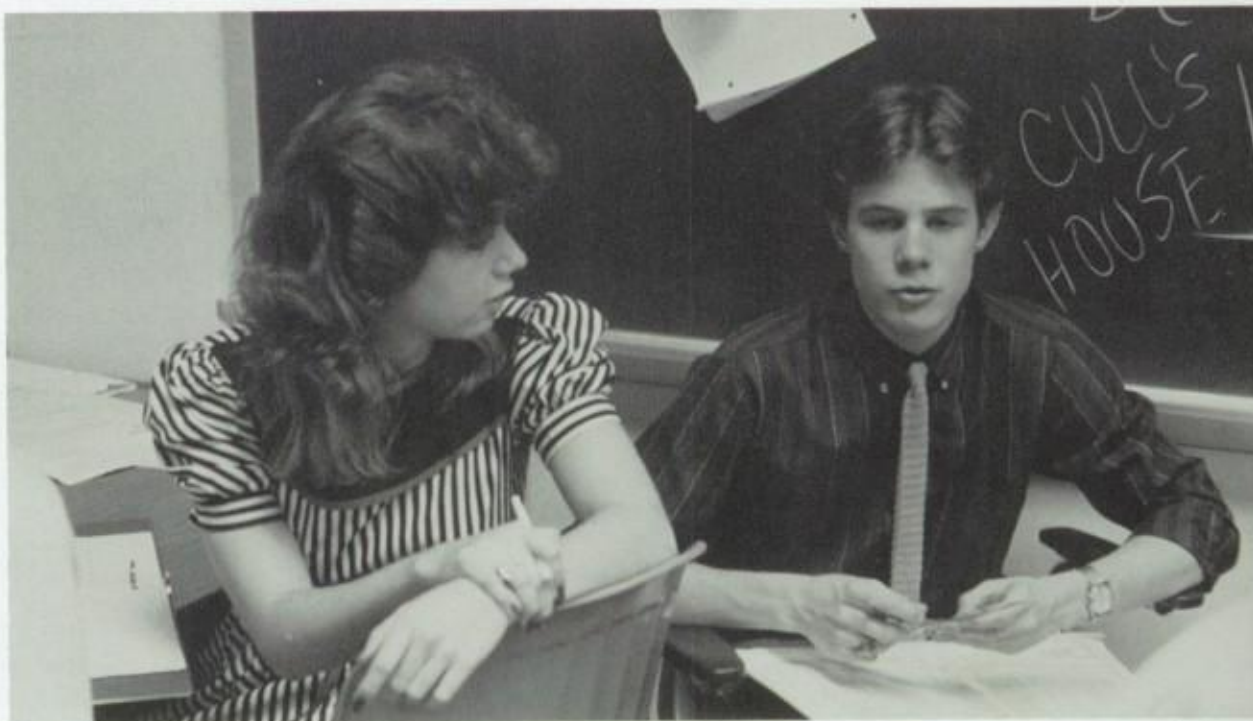

The job of designing the yearbook started early last year. The staff was selected and the ads were passed out so that the students could get a head start. Five from the staff chose to attend the Hanover Yearbook Workshop to begin designing the yearbook and each section. However, the summer came quickly to an end and the actual designing began. The first deadline came upon the staff and the color part of the yearbook was designed. With the completion of each section and page, the 1985-86 TEMPO began to take shape and record the history which this year's BHS students have made. Also, with the progression of the months, the staff not only began to learn about responsibility and dedication, but also how to work as a group.

86 Student Life

Humor. Excitement. These words described the fall play, You Can't Take It With You. The plot was about the different attitudes on life two men took. Mr. Vanderhof, average in life style, felt happiness should be the main goal in life, whereas Mr. Kirby, a rather wealthy man, started life living the same day over and over. Even though he was unhappy, he would not change his life. When Mr. Vanderhof told Mr. Kirby how he felt about life, Mr. Kirby changed his view.

The play was given by newcomers and veteran actors. Some people felt character distribution was irregular. Sophomore Bill Schendel, a veteran actor, said, "The whole cast thought the casting was bad, that we were playing the wrong parts; but in the end, it turned out the best for everybody."

Cultural Rhythms

Foreign language clubs served as extensions of cultural activities introduced in class. These organizations gave members a better understanding of the lifestyles and customs of various languages. They did not restrict their activities only to club meetings, however. Some participated in Homecoming activities, in club parties, and in the promotion of foreign languages to the student body. Latin Club lent its time to various state activities. As a member of the Indiana Junior Classical League, the club members participated in President's Day at Owen Valley H.S., ran in the chariot race at the Speedway, and hosted a certamen. As state corresponding secretary, senior Darby Wolf found new opportunities for service. "As a state officer, I have had the chance to meet many new people from all over the country." In addition to participating in the state convention, this club was also responsible for stage decorations at the national convention to be held at IU in August. The foreign language clubs as a whole added a new dimension to the tempo of life at BHS.

Working Together

All the service clubs banded together to reach out and make themselves available to the community and, more importantly, to the student body. The Key Club lent a hand with the therapy for Tam Crum's younger brother Ben. The Student Council helped with activities involving the entire student body. SADD gave the student an opportunity to express themselves about driving drunk. The National Honor Society gave outstanding students the chance to serve by tutoring other students. All of these clubs strived to be added extensions of the continuing pace at BHS. When asked why she served on the Student Council, sophomore Kelli Payne said, "I like being able to work together and accomplish things for the school."

Paying Interest

Co-curricular clubs such as OEA and DECA served as important extensions of classroom studies. With a strong emphasis on the business world, they provided opportunities for students to interact with members of the business community through contests, job interviews, and actual job placement. Club participants were able to compete on district, state, and even national levels in a variety of categories pertaining to business. But support clubs were not associated only with classroom work. The Wrestlettes were a group of girls interested in aiding and supporting the wrestling teams. According to freshman Jennifer West, the main purpose of this group was "to keep score and cheer on the team." By decorating lockers, cheering at meets, and running the meets, the girls gave the team the extra enthusiasm needed for success.

Creative Expressions

Free time was spent in a variety of ways. Some clubs encouraged the creativity of the members. The Brain Game allowed members to demonstrate their knowledge against other high school teams. Creative Writing helped write and edit literature printed in the Literary Magazine contained within the yearbook. Another form of ingenuity was displayed by the Thespians and their work with the fall and spring productions You Can't Take It With You and Ten Little Indians. Originality and inventiveness became evident through functions of these clubs. The Thespians tried something new and different in the plays. Senior Traci Pollitt said, "It was the first time we used special effects." To join Thespians, students had to participate in numerous activities including being in the school plays either as an actor or as a crew member. This desire to be a part of something added to the tempo at BHS.

Farmer Boy

After Autumn
has opened her eyes,
the sun disappears
and clouds fill the sky.

Little farmer boy
is hard at work;
the harvest has to come in or his money's cut short.

Look out the window
into the field next door;
See the big, red tractor harvesting wheat and more.

Now our little farmer boy
has come inside to rest,
His job done quite well
Waiting till next harvest.

Two Colored World

The trees outside are black,
The grass is all painted gray.
I'm living in a two color world,
My life has gone astray.

My heart is broken, I'm sad and lonely,
My vision is blurred by dust.
My world is falling apart around me.
There's no one I can trust.

My head whirls of things remembered,
But yet I no longer conceive.
I'm living in a two colored world,
Except for in my dreams.

My First Love

At first our love seemed like a fairy tale,
The more I saw of you the more I cared
I did not know that love could be so frail,
I did not even think I could be scared.
You said our love would never fade away.
I did not see I soon would lose control.
I still believed you 'till the final day.
I soon found out I could not keep my hold.
I was in shock when our love came to an end,
I felt as if a part of me had died.
It took a long time for my heart to mend,
And for a second chance I long did strive.
My memories of you I'll always keep,
And when I think of you my heart will weep.

Charlie Gray

I know I shall never forget the day,
When I met that man named Charlie Gray.
His face looked not young and yet not old,
But in his eyes a story was told.

Since that day not one had gone by,
That we hadn't been together, Charlie and I.
He told me of the girl that had once been his wife;
How her death had taken meaning from his life.

No one else knew this, or cared about him;
They only saw an old man hardened and grim.
Only I knew the strength that he had gained;
Of the struggle and hardships he overcame.

For several years we remained this way;
We laughed and talked through every day.
He taught me more, who was called a fool,
Than I'll ever learn in any school.

He died the other day at sea,
But I'm glad he first shared his life with me,
For his life was a message of courage and spirit,
And in my heart I can still hear it.

I know I shall never forget the day,
When I met that man Charlie Gray.
His face looked not young and yet not old,
But in his eyes a story was told.

Ship Of Souls

A savage tempest kills my ship — sails torn
A hideous wind, my ship it screams, I feel
It cries — it whines in the force of the storm.
My wandering ship, my heart is strong steel
But the rain cuts, it stabs — a piercing knife
My eyes witness the spillage of red blood.
Imagination looking at life.
My ship is drifting, victim of the flood.
The ship of souls, sinking slow, killing me
I look to the horizon for the blue sky
But all I find are black clouds and gray sea.
The storm goes on, the rain tears from my eyes
Still I sail with the storm, lost hopes for the land
I die with the storm, my heart turns to sand.

Dreamgiver

I enchant you at night, cradle your soul
I devour your mind and return it as whole
I'm the beauty you meet that takes your breath
I'm the horror you greet to give you death
I'm the warmth that you feel when you touch desire
I'm the depression that's real when you see I'm a liar I'm the breeze through the screen that you feel on your face
I'm the memory you're sure of you somehow misplace
I'm the magic carpet you ride through the sky
I'm the luck you receive that you thought would pass by
You never thank me for all that I do
Yet, still I am faithful to satisfy you From the time of your birth I've held you so near and the time of your death is all that I fear
So, come lie with me now, as you start to shiver
Remember your bed, your faithful dreamgiver . . .

To Lose a Life

A girl whose name was Molly Kidd
That never did her work,
Fell far behind in all she did
And was known to all, a jerk;
And was known to all, a jerk.

Poor Molly had a terrible time
In organizing her things.
She lost her mind and all her dimes
And even her favorite ring;
And even her favorite ring.

This was all her fault of course
For she misplaced them all,
And soon her voice was very hoarse
For crying, "Where's my doll?"
For crying, "Where's my doll?"

The matter became way out of hand.
Poor Molly was even worse,
And no one in this entire land
Enjoyed listening to her curse;
Enjoyed listening to her curse.

Not only did Molly lose her mind,
Her patience and her knife;
But in the end, you all will find
That Molly lost her life;
That Molly lost her life.

You

Those lonely days when I am feeling blue,
And I am oh, so cold and weak and sad,
At night I close my eyes and think of you,
and all the wonderful dreams we had.
Your beauty and grace rise above the rest
Your eyes, your soft skin, and your lips of rose,
Fill my exciting life with joy and zest.
Can you see that I care? I hope it shows,
As time passes by we grow close together.
All my hope, my dreams, inside my mind,
In my heart, my soul, You'll be there forever.
I'm not giving up; my love is not blind.
All these things I have written are true,
What I am trying to say is, I love you!

The Art

Dave Jones

Eric Wright

The trees dip and glide, mournfully the autumn days long to be shorter and the music dwindles away.
The wind, the wind as a feather flows through my body,
I do not doubt the winter that calls.
Alone I see the fear that he goes through.
Alone that's where I am.
And I see his suffering as he walks tall in his life.
He could reach the wind if he tried and I wander near, to touch
his face and to see if I am really alone.
His lonely soul hopes and preveres as if the life he once had will come back.
A triangle is formed and each time he would call out
I would die, and I would understand that people cannot live all their dreams without the inspiration.
Now and then I catch his falling star and replace his life,
And he will never disappear so his soul has tried to be replaced.
And still I am alone, only when he and I are together and I am disregarded as being a substitute. I am normally bitter.
but when I see him kneeling where he has stumbled I reach to the outer limits, almost too much at times, and I try to regain the closed emotion we will never share.
One day I hope that we will succeed.

Where Is A True Friend?

Where is a friend that are in life can trust?
For they the one that fond memories last,
and friendship like gold that shall never rust.
I seek the one who know not of my past,
For reason in which should never be told.
In me I know the truth will be my cast,
A friend whose fellowship I've not unfold,
And trust and memory shall sadly be lost.
Derived from what only a friend could aid.
I all alone must be the one to blame,
for all my trouble past not yet have fade,
And thus true friend, I seek could not be name.
then let it be if a good is rare.
Then let it be if secrets never share.

Life

The sound of ringing bells awakened me.
the sound of voices echoed me throughout These things that make me so very happy, I asked, "Is this what life is all about?"
The beautiful sight of children playing,
The beautiful sight of flower gardens,
All make it worth a great chance of living
In this world full of rubies and diamonds.
If I had a chance to be what I want to
I would be in general because I'd be ahead of these things and up in front.
For life is precious to me it came,
A world like this world can not be the same.

You comfort me and give me peace of

I wonder how one could be such a saint,
Another love like yours I'll never find.
When I need some one you're always there.
I hold you and my problems go away.
How nice it is to know that someone cares.

The One Dimensional Man

Looking at my reflection in a mirror while eating my breakfast —
I'm the One Dimensional Man
so I can do that.

I can walk through walls,
people can't hear me —
I'm the One Dimensional Man,
and that's all I want to be.

Seeing me is quite difficult, understanding me is moot —
I'm the One Dimensional Man,
and I don't need to be understood.

I make opinions quickly,
I don't have many friends —
I'm the One Dimensional Man,
and so I don't need them.

I have a girlfriend,
sometimes she says she loves me —
I'm the One Dimensional Man,
and I find her hard to believe.

Sometimes I dream,
sometimes I dream of you —
I'm the One Dimensional Man,
and I don't need to think them through.

I don't sleep,
so lead me by the hand —
I'm the One Dimensional Man,
and I'm too tired to stand.

I am very selfish,
filled with avarice and greed —
I'm the One Dimensional Man,
and I think I can afford to be.

I am a walking disaster,
a timer on a bomb —
I'm the One Dimensional Man,
don't expect to live long.

Sometimes I get hungry,
ravenous, starving inside —
I'm the One Dimensional Man,
I grit my teeth, I'll survive.

Sometimes I read,
perhaps I learn —
I'm the One Dimensional Man,
and I have time to burn.

People can't see me, except when I want them to —
I'm the One Dimensional Man,
I reveal myself to you.

I think I'm independent,
but for you I think I'll change —
I'm the One Dimensional Man,
It's easy for me to rearrange.

Staring at my writing in a tube,
while tapping my foot —
I'm the One Dimensional Man,
tapping 3-D rhythms with my foot.

Glancing across the sky to you,
It's time for me to choose —
I'm the One Dimensional Man,
and I cannot lose.

Using a shoe for a microscope,
I can see things pretty clear —
I'm the One Dimensional Man,
no one knows when I'm near.

Sometimes I think,
I search through my brain everywhere —
I'm the one Dimensional Man,
and I don't like what I'm finding there.

You say you want to leave,
but forgive me if I don't want to run away with you —
I'm the One Dimensional Man, and I don't have to.

You say you want me to give
But to you I wouldn't give a dime —
I'm the One Dimensional Man,
and I just don't have the time.

Don't get me wrong,
I love you more than I could ever say,
I'm the One Dimensional Man,
and that's just my way.

Lisa Steuerwald

poetry is thinking
 but only on paper
 a forming thought hanging in vapor

A dream you have drempt
 conforming together Building not changing living forever

Poetry is rhyme rhythm and scheme
 hidden meanings and words are not always seen

They also can rhyme or have no rhyme at all making soft lyrics
 to which someone can fall

Poetry is composure either rigid or flowing gentle hands touching hearts or red hot coals glowing

It's wondering what mood to which to change It's changing until there's not left to rearrange

But most of all poetry
 So expressing your thoughts
 And bringing out all the life and love that you've got.

Don't judge others by how they appear,
Don't form an opinion from what you hear.
Accept a person for what they are,
If you don't, they are better
BY FAR.

The Blacks and Whites are but one, because of their skin they have been shunned.
Yet, they reach for that highest star,
They are way better than us, better
BY FAR.

Remember my words, they won't leave a scar,
if they do, it might be better, better
BY FAR.

Sorrowful Joy

The leaves were softly falling,
Beauty filling the land,
In the midst of the bird's sweet calling,
I saw the creator's hand.

He had told me where to go,
Had helped me all my life,
And now he let me go, know,
It was time to choose a wife.

After my wife and I were married,
We moved to a cabin by the lake,
Where worldly pressures were not carried,
And nature's beauty was ours to take.

We were content for quite a while,
But something was not there,
Maybe a child's tender smile,
Was something our love could share.

So everyday we prayed for it,
And waited for our son,
And then God, When his precious wisdom saw fit
Gave us our precious son.

Each day we learned some more,
From our tiny charge,
We realized God had opened a door,
And our blessings, they were large.

But the winter was a hard one,
With sickness everywhere,
We feared for our son,
And our prayers were sent with care.

One fateful night,
Our son woke up with cries,
Our hearts were filled with fright,
As we listen to his sighs.

The next day he was buried,
with a cross to mark the spot,
Along with grief we carried,
Was a cry, "Oh Lord, he's all we've got."

The leaves were softly falling,
Beauty filling the land,
In the midst of the bird's sweet calling,
I saw the creator's hand.

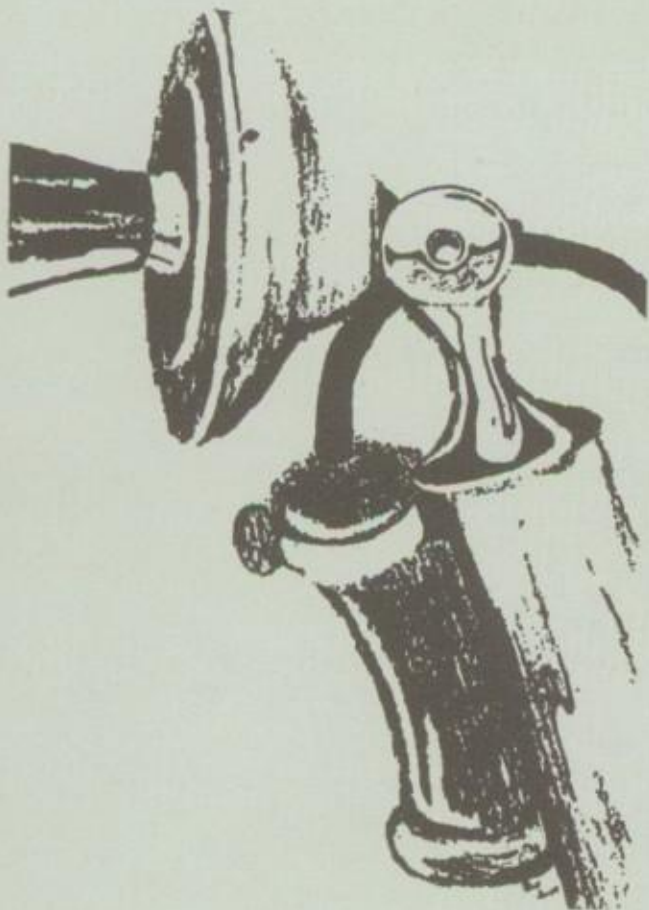

He was reaching to take from me,
Only that which should be taken,
And though it was hard to see,
I knew I was not forsaken.

It was so hard to understand,
His taking my little boy,
But in this work I could see his hand,
And it was filled with sorrowful joy.

The Bird with the Broken Wing

As I walk through the park,
I let out a great sigh.
I get this feeling that life is passing me by.
As hard as I try
I can't shake this feeling;
The pain is so bad,
I can't try concealing
This ache in my heart,
And the guilt in my soul,
that won't set me free.
I must get away
once and for all.
I shall now lay down
and wait for His call.
As I wait for the end,
I hear a strange sound.
A thud, then a cry,
as if something fell down.
I sit up, look around me
and see,
A baby bird that has fallen from a tree.
The bird looks up into the sky and wimpers as his mother and siblings fly by.
As the bird lies still
I think he'll join me in death.
But this bird is hardly done with his quest.
With all its might,
the bird jumps to his feet.
This bird is determined to take the heat.

With a hopeful flap,
he gets off the ground.
No sooner is he up,
than he comes tumbling
down.
Again and again
he sets himself right.
Only to be stopped
short in his flight.
Why, little bird
do you have such luck?
Why on the ground
are you permanently stuck?
I decide to get closer,
and I notice something;
This baby bird
has one broken wing!
A broken wing,
yet determined to fly.
One small failure
and I'm ready to die.
I smile as I pick up
this wonderful creature.
I shall nurture and care for my marvelous teacher.
Soon his wings will heal,
and he'll fly one day.
As my heart will mend,
and I'll go my own way.

No More Smiling Faces

I'd never felt such stillness, not even once before.
The doves are all now dead, and the children play no more.
I sit upon this swing and stare up to the slide.
No more smiling faces, for all the laughter died.
The storm clouds never fade; their thickness just grows strong.
I haven't seen the sun for, oh, so very long.
It's funny how these storm clouds never bring the rain.
They sail across the sky and bring me only pain.
And now the bright green grass is covered with the ash.
The world that held the beauty contains, now, only trash.
They sailed into the air; as minutes passed they flew.
I saw them in the air, but what was I to do?
I heaved my only sigh and shed my only tear.
My heart did surely tremble, but what was I to fear?
I thought of God in heaven and Satan in his hell.
Where was I to go; I surely could not tell.
I'd never felt such stillness, not even once before.
The doves are all now dead, For they died within the war
...

 But I would like to kill you like in "MacBeth".
 I want to take over your father's estate in a coup.
 Now that I killed your father, you're next in line.
 I hated to, but now I look forward to killing you,
 But I always remember the way you looked to me.
 I have to do it even though our love is true.
 Now I have your riches and from them I have stole.
 But I cannot be happy for I am haunted by your soul.

Your life was ended with that deadly smash.

Cheerleaders

A great way to raise spirit and make friends

Cheering was not exactly as easy as some people thought. For a start, the cheerleaders had practices just like all the rest of the sports. In practice, the girls worked on their routines, cheers, and partner stunts. As all the squad realized, timing and rhythm were very important to the routine, and to execute it properly required hours of practice.

Through all of the effort, the girls became good friends. Commenting on the friendship, senior Kim Gilbert remarked, "Since we spend so much time together, everyone on the squad gets to know each other really well and through cheerleading, there are many lasting friendships that are made." Early disappointments in contests were replaced by the thrill of winning the Pacers, Q95 Cheerleading Contest at Market Square Arena in February. Kim expressed the sentiments of the entire squad: "All the work that we put into our routine was worth it when we won. Winning that contest was a great way to end the season for us seniors!"

they lifted weights to help their endurance, especially for the final mile sprint. To build the stamina for a 3.1 mile run, team members used overdistance training, which consisted of an eight mile run plus a couple of miles for a cool down. Mark Davis, a senior cross country runner, stated: "It could have been our best team, and everybody got along pretty well." Davis went on to add about Coach Reusser: "This is the first time he had the boy's team and he was enthusiastic about working with the guys and about our chances of going to semi-state." the past 8 or 9 games we have been communicating much better on the court. We also have improved in getting along with other team members. This also helps us to play better in the games." The good attitudes displayed by the team members provided a strong backbone for the team.

The girls did many things to boost team spirit, from doing cheers before meets to dressing up in costumes for Halloween. Senior Kelly Gibson had this to say about the team's spirit: "This team was the best when it came to supporting our own swimmers. We even had a team at C-SAC come up and tell us that they really thought it was neat." With the spirit came team unity. Activities done as a team bonded the girls together. At the close of the season, the closeness of the girls was topped off with a crazy banquet and the memories of the successful season.

games by giving the 'Dogs another great season. Prior to the games, the 'Dogs warmed up by going through stretches and warm up exercises. In addition, they broke into special interest groups. On this subject Allen said, "Everyone went their separate ways and just thought of what they had to do to play their best game." And play good games was exactly what the team did, with new records set throughout the season. After the games the players and coaches went over the games in hopes that any mistakes would not be repeated. The practices, the meetings, and the pain paid off in the end with the second consecutive undefeated season.

State Champs

Sweeter —
the second time around

Brownsburg football! What more needs to be said? The 'Dogs captured their second straight state title defeating the Hobart Brickies 23-17 in the Hoosier Dome on November 30. The game started off in Hobart's favor with the Brickies winning the toss. But that was all Hobart had in their favor because the game belonged to the Bulldogs. In the first quarter of play, Brownsburg scored the first points with a field goal followed by a touchdown. In the second quarter, the 'Dogs again dominated the scoring with another touchdown on a long pass from senior Dan Gatlin to Rob Mutzl, senior. The Brickies kicked a field goal, but that was all for the first half. The 'Dogs relaxed in the third quarter, and Hobart tied the score 17-17. But in the final seconds of the game, the 'Dogs regained possession of the ball on Hobart's 42 yard line. Gatlin glanced over the field and saw senior Scott Wells wide open in the end zone. He released a very well placed bomb that will go down in football history as the cause for one of the most miraculous finishes in a championship game. That pass put Brownsburg in the record books as the 4-A football state champions.

Tennis

Experience — swinging to success

In spite of a need to upgrade the tennis courts and a lack of a summer competitive program, a junior high team, or little-league type training, the tennis team was able to improve its overall team performance this year. With only two returning lettermen and the majority of the players underclassmen, the team made up for the lack of

Wrestling

Drilling for perfection

Encouragement was a key word to describe this year's wrestling team. Senior Tim Price said "Mr. Freijie gives each wrestler encouragement who works for it. He tells us what to do and what is expected of us and then the captains talk and everyone tries their best." In spite of the many injuries, the wrestlers were able to keep team unity, which provided encouragement for everyone.

In practice, the wrestlers did warm-ups and drills such as take-downs and pins and then they ran sprints. Many of the wrestlers before a meet mentally visualized what they wanted to accomplish and how they were going to perform in the match. With many wrestlers returning and with a summer to recuperate, the team looked forward to an improved season next year.

Playing in the C-SAC conference helped the girls experience playing against inner-city schools." The girls had some tough practices in which they ran five minute sprints in addition to shooting drills and free throws. Along with mental preparation, they also scrimmaged to improve on plays in preparation for playing the real games. With many injuries this year, the girls held on and improved as the season progressed. With only two seniors leaving this year, the team looked forward to an improved season next year due to the experience of the younger players.

Basketball

Winning season, new coach, fun and excitement for all

Attitude was the name of the game. Brownsburg basketball had a new look, by the name of Coach Leedy. Team unity was obvious and senior Darin Archer agreed, "Our team has great unity. Every player is a team player and for an example, when we break our huddle, we say 'Together' because that is how we win!" Preparations for the game included grueling practices with many drills and practice games. Not only did the team need physical preparation but mental preparation as well. Archer commented on the mental preparations: "We watch game films during the week of a game. Mentally — we are not allowed to talk to girlfriends before the game and the only music we listen to before the game is John Phillip Sousa."

When asked if Coach Leedy provided encouragement for the team, Archer said, "Coach Leedy has his pep talks. They are always emphasizing how we must win as a team. I think that is one of the reasons we are winning." Whatever the formula, it worked. The team provided the fans with an exciting, successful season.

Swimming

Practice and patience pay off

Miles and miles — that was what the swim team endured in practice throughout their season. Going to morning practice as well as evening did not seem to bother the dedicated team members. philosophy of swimming longer yardage in practice developed the team into stronger swimmers." When asked about team unity, Cull responded, "We were all really close. We were like a big family, and we joked around and picked on each other like brothers. At the meets there were always people cheering on the swimmers."

Their season was riddled with untimely illness and injury, but the guys kept swimming. Through their efforts, the team finished second team all-county, barely losing out to Avon. With the help of the underclassmen and the coach, the seven seniors had a season they will remember for a very long time.

SMILE AND SAY CARRYOUT

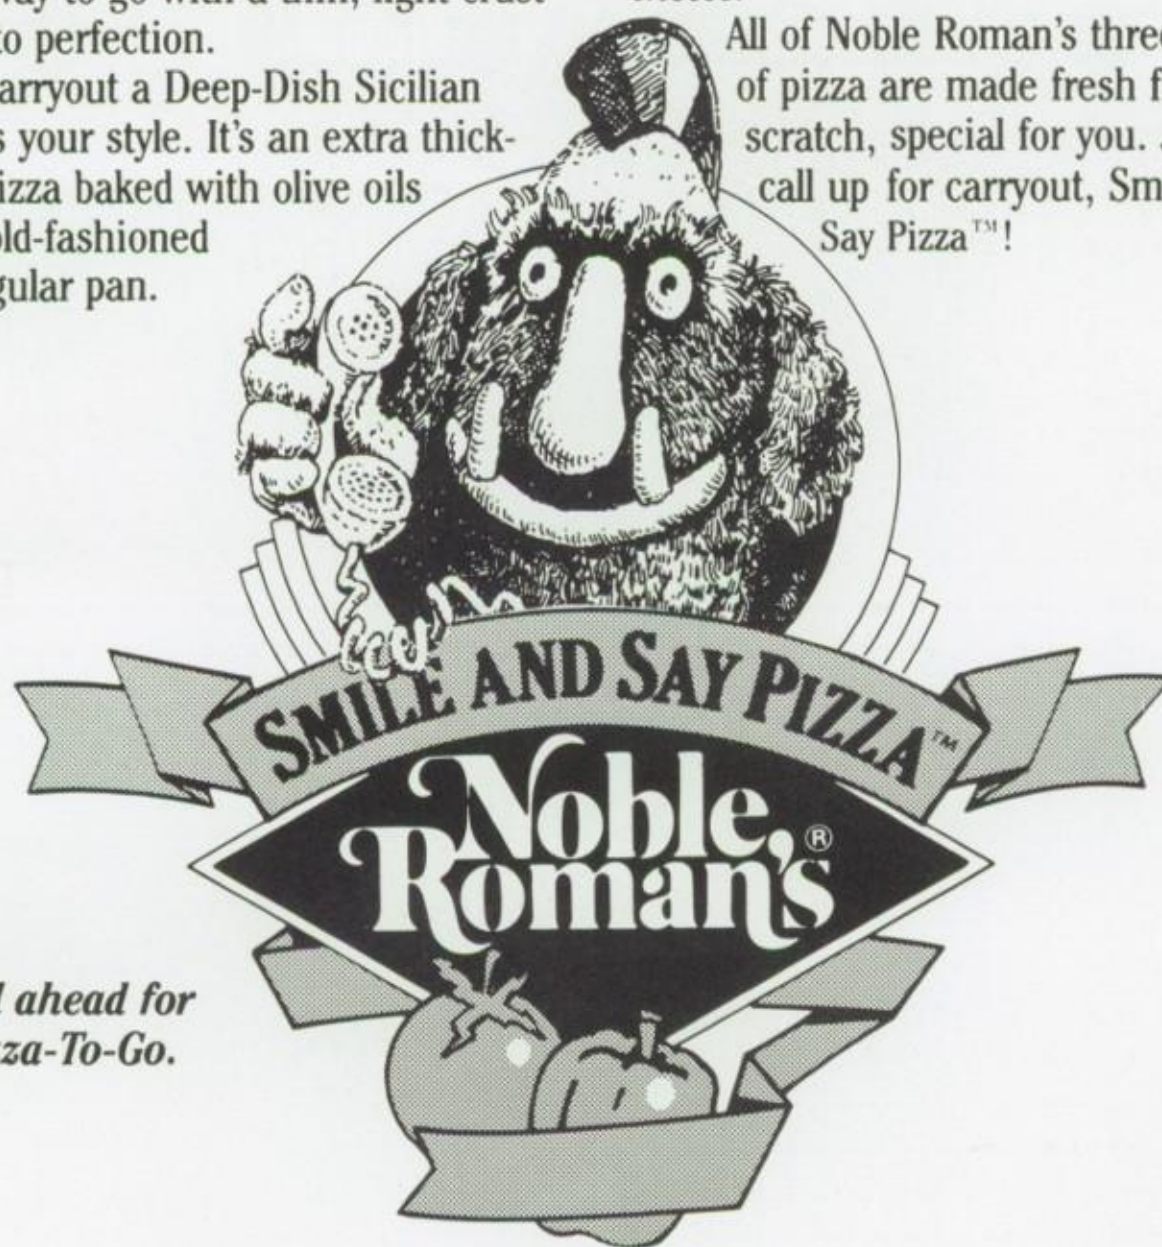

Carryout one of Noble Roman's three kinds of pizza for three kinds of fun.

Let our hand-tosser toss your Hand-Tossed Round. It's the traditional way to go with a thin, light crust baked to perfection.

Or carryout a Deep-Dish Sicilian if that's your style. It's an extra thick-crust pizza baked with olive oils in an old-fashioned rectangular pan.

But carryout Noble Roman's Monster[®] pizza for the biggest smile of all. It's the pizza-lover's pizza with twice the meat and vegetable toppings you want plus three times more cheese.

All of Noble Roman's three kinds of pizza are made fresh from scratch, special for you. Just call up for carryout, Smile and Say Pizza[™]!

Call ahead for Pizza-To-Go.

Time has run out

The final curtain has fallen. The final bell has sounded. The final note has faded away. Time has run out for the 1985-86 school year. For the seniors, it was the inevitable end of hard work, sometimes bitter tears, and wonderful memories. For the parents, it was the culmination of twelve years of encouragement and support. For the younger students, it was another dream of coming victories. But it also was the end which had to come before a new chapter of life could begin. The rhythm and beat of "Bulldog Country" did not end with the close of the school year, but it lived on in the job world, on college campuses, across America, and in the heart and life of the community.

Jeremy,

Hey, yo! Whas-up? You must have me read this to yaw, cause its in African give mahm. Well, yaw ain't a fresh mahm any mo! So, wass it like to be a big, bad Sophomore?
 Fun, huh? Since you are now engaged in a long term girl-boy relationship, you can't look for the babes this summer? You queer!
 But? You can look for em for me to have? Right? So, ha! April! I know we'll have a great summer, so hang in there stud! Okay? That is, if you don't have too much fun with April & you too tired to do anything & well, I better go. Have the best of luck with April, & find me a babe!

Jeremy,

To a real sweet and cute guy. I'm glad I got to know you this year (or whenever it was!)
I'm glad I got to ~~have~~ have you in my science class. You really are a sweet heart and I know you will go far! Have a great summer and don't get in trouble. Good luck with all your girlfriends!

See you
next year!

How's my Pooky Bear?!?

They listen - thank's for 5/24/86!
It ~~was~~ was a real Bhoot! → (except for the witness!) - (if you know what I mean!)

Remember 5/18/86? -

Our first sugar ~~was~~! honey!!!!

Well anyway, I just wrote to tell you I really love you + I hope our dream of the A-framed house + 2 kids, you - architect + me a dentist living in Hawaii with a beach for a front yard + you + your porch + Lamborghini (I can't spell that!) and me + my "Ettie" & Live's on.

Well lets try hard to ripen + preserve our frutty relationship? (just yours!) &

Well, room is not on our

My sweetheart! Well we're finished with our first year of high school in a breeze! It seems like only yesterday we were just in 6th grade again. I'll know you for a long, long time. And you're a real sweet, cute little babe! I love ya!!! Since I wasn't in any of your classes this year maybe ~~at~~ we will be in 10th next year together. Good luck in every thing you do and I hope all your dreams come true & succeed! Sorry this is so sloppy but I think Carol is running over every bump he sees!

Love ya lots & always!
